Important information for running Active Trader Pro® on the Microsoft Vista operating system

Please note that the current version of Active Trader Pro® (ATP), version 6.2, was not designed to run on Vista. The steps provided should allow the program run, but we can not guarantee full compatibility with ATP & Vista. ATP will be fully Vista (32bit) compatible with our 7.0 release scheduled for early May.

How to install ATP 6.2 onto a new Vista Computer (no previous installation of ATP)

Click here if you upgraded to Vista and ATP was already installed on your computer.

In order to install Active Trader Pro® on a new computer with the Microsoft Vista operating system, please review the following information:

- 1. Ensure that you are running Vista as a Administrator
- 2. Download ATP from atp.fidelity.com. http://atp.fidelity.com/version62/ATsetup.exe
- 3. Save ATsetup.exe to your Desktop.
- 4. Right click on ATsetup.exe and choose to Run as Administrator
- 5. Click Run

6. Click Continue

7. Installation will start and you will be prompted that Active Trader Pro has stopped working. Select Close Program to continue. There is no problem.

8. A second error window will appear; you may click Close program for this one as well.

9. After the second error message, the installation will complete.

10. Shortly after the installation is finished another window will display asking you if the application installed correctly. Select "This program installed correctly" and the installation process is complete.

Known issues with ATP & Vista

1. ATP requires administrative access to run. ATP will stop running with one of the two messages below if that is not set.

- 2. During Installation or Uninstall of ATP, Microsoft will detect a crash problem. This does not appear to cause any problems to ATP.
- 3. ATP Quick Start feature may crash; please do not turn on Quick Start when running ATP on the Vista operating system.
- 4. Atpstart.exe shows as an unidentified application in Vista's User Account Control.
